Art for Conservation

Since 2008, local artists called The Artists of the Gallows Run have transformed the iconic barn of Rising Sun Farm into a gallery celebrating unique visions of our world. Paintings, photography, prints, sculptures, jewelry, and woodwork are only a few examples annually showcased in this diverse, free exhibit. Art for Conservation usually runs at the barn for a weekend in October (Friday-Sunday) and then has venues elsewhere such as Nurture Nature Center, Heritage Conservancy's Aldie Manson, and Palisades High School.

The show is heavily focused on both community and the preservation of that community's natural areas. Neighbors and art lovers are invited to meet the Artists themselves, enjoy live music, sample local cuisine, and purchase original pieces and prints. Forty percent of sales are donated by the Artists toward land conservation effort in Nockamixon Township.

The Artists also maintain a mentoring association with Palisades High School. A juried competition is designed to encourage young artists and connect them with the local art community. These pieces, created by hard-working and talented students, are displayed on their own wall at the show.

Dates and locations change every year. Information (and partners) can be found on:
